The egg has hatched! What is lurking inside?

Last week in Oak class my class and I found a dragon's egg in our teachers' cupboard. Three days later, the small egg hatched and a dragon came out.

On Wednesday the egg was sitting in the bird like nest. The following morning, we were in the middle of English when our teacher Miss Wilson went to get something from the cupboard but she forgot about the things and came out with a dragon instead! Everybody was shocked and so surprised that Miss Wilson brought out a red, squirming dragon. The dragon had little, black claws and its teeth were as white as snow also it had sharp, blue horns. "I think it is hungry" Miss Wilson whispered. Miss Wilson saying that made me frightened that it might eat me. I realised that it was too small to eat me. That was a relief!

This is an incredible discovery because it is not normal to have a dragon hatch at school. I've never seen a dragon in the school before.

Since then it has been with Mrs Myers who is looking after it. "I offered to take care of the dragon because it will keep my dog Lexi company!" exclaimed Mrs Myers. We are probably going to let it go soon.
